Clinic Description

This clinic is an introduction to herding designed for both novice dogs and handlers. Previous experience is not necessary or required. The clinic will be broken into two parts. The first part will consist of a discussion about herding, followed by an instinct evaluation of the participant's dogs. The second part is designed to provide a hands-on setting to understand and start to develop the partnership between dog and handler to move livestock in a safe and controlled manner. Between the 1st and 2nd part of the clinic we will break for a potluck lunch.

Clinic starts at 9 AM and typically ends around 3PM. We will be working inside a enclosed arena however, depending on weather and/or level of dog/handler we may work outside in one of the larger fields.

The stock is a mixture of Barbs, Barb crosses and other hair sheep.

Stock is dog broke and very workable.

Please bring boots that provide good ankle support, clothes appropriate for the weather, and a dish to share for lunch. The weekend before the clinic I will send out confirmation notices with more information, however I will contact individuals immediately if an entry is sent in and the the clinic is full.

We do not provide refunds, however if we receive adequate notice that you will unable to attend, we will make every attempt to schedule you into one of our future clinics, if room allows.

If you have any questions please contact Judi at hadobar@gmail.com
