fine art photography and photo-based artwork

A New England native, award-winning photographer Lynne Guimond Findlay has captured memorable images in the most distant reaches of the world. Her work has

- been displayed in area galleries
- been published internationally, and
- received national recognition and awards.

She spent several years working in the publishing industry, where she purchased, edited, and cropped photography for use in local and international magazines. Over that time, she reviewed hundreds of thousands of photographs and personally art-directed hundreds of assignments.

Sparked by a lifelong interest in the arts, Lynne purchased her first professional-caliber camera less than a decade ago. Since then, she has recorded remarkable images in Nepal, Thailand, Egypt, China, Belize, Guatemala, Morocco, Gibraltar, and Spain... as well as much closer to home.

In 2004, Lynne purchased her first digital camera; less than a month later, she opened her first all-digital juried exhibit. That same year, she experimented with commentary art; her first efforts were almost immediately accepted by a Boston gallery. During 2007 and 2008 retreats, she refined her interest in Miksang (meditative photography), in which the executor of an artwork incorporates the viewer into the creative process, thereby dissolving any "me/you" duality.

Lynne's background as an art director is reflected in her work. Many of her studies are made from an unusually intimate distance. Her landscape and cityscape shots debunk the "wide-angle" stereotype, and her still life images are iconographic. She specializes in "through the lens" composition, so her images are rarely, if ever, cropped.
